

coreAssembler Help

Help: Initialize Subsystem Constraints

The new activity enables you to control how system level clocks are defined. For example, you can merge virtual clocks into common top-level virtual clocks by giving them the same name. The clock linking and constraint propagation which previously occurred at the end of Generate Subsystem RTL now occurs in this new activity.

You can access the coreAssembler User Guide instructions for initializing subsystem constraints by clicking on the topic:

Initialize Subsystem Constraints

Close